Death of Charles McHardy.

The friends of Charles McHardy, in Owosso, received intelligence of his death, yesterday afternoon. He died at the home of his sister in Almont. His death was not an unexpected event—always a great sufferer, he has of late been very sick. His brother, Mr. Arthur McHardy, left at once for Almont. It is expected the deceased will be brought to Owosso for burial.

Our President.

The great heart of the nation has ceased to pulsate with hope, as the messages come over the wires "the President is better," "he passed a comfortable night," "the wound is healing," "his stomach retains food," "he is not suffering from the inflammation," and other bulletins, containing words calculated to strengthen hope, and to encourage the people in the belief that their wounded chief Magistrate will not die by the assassin's blow.

These messages to the people are doubtless honest opinions of men who cannot in their earnest solicitude, give utterance to the terrible words, "there is no hope for him, he must die."

But already the people know that he lies hard by "the valley of the shadow of death."

The wound is now open to a depth of twelve inches. An incision has been made in the parotid gland. Dr. Bliss says that nourishment is what is needed, and that what his stomach refuses except of the most delicate kind and in very small quantities. All reports agree that President Garfield is exhausted, emaciated and perhaps wandering in his mind and incoherent in his speech. Aug. 25—The President's condition shows no improvement over yesterday.

LATER: The President's symptoms all worse. He is not expected to live but a few hours.

Attention, Soldiers and Their Friends.

Tuesday morning 'as a freight train was coming from the north Jerome E. Turner and his brother, Charles E., were about to cross the first crossing north of the J. Pensions Increased.

I would invite the attention of all invalid pensioners to the fact that, under the repeated changes of laws and the increasing disabilities of pensioners that very many now on the rolls are entitled to an increase of pensions.

It is from fifteen to eighteen years since many received the wound, incurred the injury or contracted the disease for which the pensions were granted. The wound has gradually undermined the constitution, the arm or leg has gradually become weaker the rupture or hernia has probably grown larger, or in some manner the disability has increased from what it was at first, in such cases increase may be obtained.

The application should be made in correct shape, as many claims are sacrificed by not presenting them in the right manner. Pensioners and soldiers will find it to their advantage to call and see me as I have had considerable experience in this business, and we all know that experience is everything and can attend promptly and efficiently to all claims entrusted to me.

I make it a rule never to file a claim unless I think it a good one, and thus save time and expense to the claimant.

Previous to March 2d, 1873, invalid pensioners could not draw more than $3 per month, no matter how badly disabled, now it is different, and $18 per month may be proportionally divided according to degree of disability, in special cases $24, $31.25, and $75 may be received per month.

An increase if allowed, dates back from the soldier's examination by the examining surgeon. Application should be made at once. Address with stamp, or call and see me. Office at 315, corner Main and Michigan Avenue, Owosso, Michigan.
